Eadie Gourmet Eats Out at the Harrison West Holiday Potluck

by Veda Gilp

If you came to the December 18 Holiday Potluck, you know how very good the food was. If you didn't, I feel for your poor, unrewarded, neglected taste buds!

You missed a convivial gathering in a spacious setting, some good door prizes, another chance to get to know your Community Police Liaison officers, and the opportunity to get your picture in the Harrison West News and on the Harrison Website (harrisonwest.org).

Here are some of the food highlights of that enjoyable evening. If I didn't get your name correct, or attributed your dish to someone else, please forgive me: I was talking, taking pictures, and eating!

I swooned over the creamy seafood chowder with festive and flavorful red and green peppers.

I think Julia High brought some great artichoke dip.

The lentil taboulah salad was light yet filling, and all that parsley made one's mouth sing.

Tom Maxwell brought a really good black bean salad that he "threw together." We could use the recipe, Tom.

So many people bragged about Matt Tangeman's great Italian stew after the street party, that he made it again. It was, if anything, even better on a cold winter night, and hot with spicy sausage.
